A graduate of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and a metallurgist, he was affiliated with Aluminum Company of America for thirty-nine years, retiring in 1962 after four years as Vice President for Research and Development. JOHN L. HELLER has been Chairman of the Department of Classics, University of Illinois, Urbana, Ill., since 1949. Latin lexicography has long been an area of his special interest, and especially that in the major works of Linnaeus. His earlier investigations in biological literature were associated with Linnaeus' entomological studies. This led to studies in the botanical field and to his paper, "Index auctorum et librorum a Linnaeo (Species plantarum, 1953) citatorum" in The Ray Society facsimile edition of Species plantarum, 1958 (Appendix to vol. 2).

ELIZABETH D. KAY is an artist, book collector, plantsman, and student of tropical horticulture and ecology. She served two terms as a Director of the Garden Club of America, and for twenty years was an editor of its Bulletin. She was formerly active in the field of nursing and served on boards of the National Visiting Nurse Association and National Association for Practical Nurse Education. With her husband, Alfred G. Kay, she has recently planned, built, and equipped a teaching center for nature conservation education on a 130-acre tract west of Palm Beach, Florida.

GEORGE H. M. LAWRENCE has been Director of the Hunt Botanical Library since 1960, and for the previous decade was Professor of Botany and Director of the L. H. Bailey Hortorium, Cornell University.

IAN MACPHAIL is Bibliographer on the staff of the Hunt Botanical Library. He is a graduate of the University of Aberdeen in 1949 and the University of London School of Librarianship and Archives in 1955.
