Soviet journals important for taxonomic botany: A translation of Zaikonnikowa's list, with emendations

Janice C. Coffey

Introduction

In 1968, T. I. Zaikonnikowa published a paper in Volume 5 (pp. 254-282) of Новости систематики высших растений (Novitates systematicae plantarum vascularium) entitled "Перечень сокращенных названий главнейшей ботанической литературы. 1. Периодика" (Synopsis abbreviationum nominum editionum botanicarum principalium. 1. Opera periodica.)" [List of abbreviated names of the major botanical literature. 1. Periodicals]. In it the author gives recommended title abbreviations for 104 Soviet journals (pp. 255-260) considered to be important for taxonomic reference. Since these abbreviations are routinely used by Soviet authors and since the list includes some of the more obscure works, it seemed useful to make this information more widely available, supplementing that in Botanico-Periodicum-Huntianum (G. H. M. Lawrence et. al., eds., Pittsburgh, 1968).

In the course of comparing Zaikonnikowa's citations with those in B-P-H and other references, it became clear that although B-P-H includes citations for most of these Soviet works, there are several instances where title changes cannot be traced accurately in it, as well as differences in the title abbreviations it recommends. On the other hand, Zaikonnikowa often conflates two or more slight title variants; thus, a single item in her list will often have its equivalent in several B-P-H entries. Also, on occasion she appears to be incorrect in her continuation references, or fails to provide them, and sometimes she does not give previous-title references. This all has necessitated emendations to some of her entries. Furthermore, the Cyrillic transliterations in B-P-H have been, in many cases, rendered obsolete by the publication of a revised international standard in 1968, which is adopted herein.

Zaikonnikowa's list is reproduced here with entries arranged according to the Russian alphabet, as she presented them. To facilitate use, the order of information within each entry has been standardized as follows, regardless of the order in the original paper:

Russian title abbreviation recommended by Zaikonnikowa — Russian title in full.

Titles in other languages as they appear on title pages, but not those of the various republics of the USSR, which Zaikonnikowa does not include, with the exception of the Ukrainian language.

Roman transliteration of Russian title abbreviation — Transliteration of Russian title in full (Ukrainian titles are not transliterated).

Translation of supplementary information given by Zaikonnikowa, usually pertaining to language changes on title pages.

Russian title changes as given by Zaikon-nikowa, treated according to the above sequence, or referenced by number if relevant entries appear elsewhere in this list.

Emendations to complete and/or correct Zaikonnikowa's entries appear within square brackets at the appropriate places. Capitalization in all cases follows that used by Zaikonnikowa. I have followed the transliteration for Cyrillic set forth in 1968 by the International Organization for Standardization (ISO-2). (An excellent discussion of transliteration problems appears in Taxon 30(1): 168-183, 1981.) However, Zaikonnikowa's name is rendered as she transliterates it in the original article. This differs slightly from the spelling that would be used according to ISO-2, but I have maintained it in the belief that the transliteration of authors' names should accord with their own express preferences. Geographic names conform to those currently used by the United States Board on Geographic Names.

Acknowledgement

When I began this work I envisioned a "simple" translation project. However, Mr. Gavin Bridson, Bibliographer at the Hunt Institute, dispelled any notion of this as he began to suggest extensive addenda/corrigenda, most of which have been incorporated in the final paper. If this reference is found to be useful, it will be due in large part to his assistance with the intricacies of bibliographic work.

It will be most helpful if any reader who discovers discrepancies in these citations will inform the author, who is clearly responsible for any errors that appear.

Index

The following Roman-alphabet index includes the title abbreviations used by Zaikonnikowa, those supplied by me according to her style, and those from B-P-H that relate to the works covered. It also includes all non-Russian titles (in full) found on the title pages of the journals, and those Russian titles (in full) reported secondarily in the list entries. The asterisked abbreviations are those from B-P-H, which used the now superseded ISO-1 transliteration system; many are thus obsolete.
